[Groton, Mass.] The writer has received the petition from Dr. Amos Farnsworth. The whole care of circulating petitions rests on the writer. Wants to see the Grimké sisters, and understands that Angelina is to address a committee from the Legislature. The writer believes the Grimkés are doing a great work for the country by emancipating women. Dwells at length on their influence in Groton. They will be invited again in the Spring as "there is another place besides Mr. [Dudley] Phelps' pulpit," a hall where "freedom of speech is enjoyd." A revival of religion is in progress here, with a large number of converts. [illegible]riter reports the resolutions laid before the Moral Refor[illegible]iety. [Groton, Mass.] The writer explains that she is famous for looking after people, especially ministers. Tells of a Brother Lord's alarm at a meeting held in Boston, the object of which was "to dispense with the Bible, & do away Gods religion ... & to exalt humanity." The writer feels it a duty to investigate, as she is not sure of having heard the truth. Asks the addressee's opinion about the (Christian Union) Convention. Believes that more of the Holy Ghost is needed to carry out the principles of equal rights. Describes her own passage from laboring for one church exclusively to a non-sectarian point of view. [illegible] that "in our conventions more regard ought to be paid to [illegible] Gospel rule & less said about parliamentary rules."

To ‹Elizabeth Barrett?› Browning | No.501

‹Dresden, (Germany)› The author discusses the search for the secret of Titian's painting by a man named Taylor. Doesn't think that Titian had any secret. Discusses European politics. Says the Italians wouldn't know what to do with freedom if they got it. Says that there is nothing one can do to help the European situation. Is copying "bits of Titian and Veronese..." His father and mother send their regards. Praises Raphael's San Sisto.

.West Roxbury (Mass.). Refers to the paper published by Dr. (J.E.) Snodgrass in Maryland. Mentions "the noble stand" of Cassius Marcellus Clay in Kentucky. Northern abolitionists are either excluded from the South or considered as extraneous and meddling. Believes that "hard words do not make converts." Understands the indignation of the slaveholder. Contrasts the abolitionists with the sympathetic, lukewarm class to which the writer belongs. Pays eloquent tribute to the devotion of abolitionists.

«West Roxbury, Mass.» Having been asked to contribute to the Liberty Bell, the writer asserts that there is no lack of subject matter. Especially points out that the horrors of the slave trade rouse indignation, "but we have no hard words & no unkind thoughts when our neighbor is the slave trader." The reason why the writer has not responded is that he believes there are many abler writers than himself, and he encloses instead a sum to be used toward the publication.

.West Roxbury (Mass.). Encloses ten dollars in aid of the Liberty Bell. Explains, however, that he is not of the Abolitionist Party, "although, instead of opposition to it, I have always entertained the highest respect for its courage, talent, perseverance & consistency." If the writer does not always approve, "it is because I think its means are not always conducive to the righteous end it has in view." Whatever lukewarmness may be in the writer is "abundantly atoned for in the zeal & activity" of his wife. The writer sympathizes with the addressee for "the trials & additional responsibility to which you are subjected in the absence of your able & excellent sister."

Adams, John Quincy, 1767-1848; president of the U.S.

To William Plumer, governor of N.H.

[Washington.] Has regularly sent him public documents which he thought would be acceptable. Realizes that the resolution of Congress to publish all such correspondence would supersede the intentions of his son, and so has taken no further steps. Defends his stand in the question of the constitutional power of Congress in regard to internal improvement. Comments on the position of Russian representatives. Believes that Pinckney was deiven home more because of lack of funds than from the rigorous climate. Reports that relations with Spain are critical, the more so since the recent events in Florida.

To General Benjamin Lincoln.

[Charleston, S. C.] Any vessel may lay at Gadsden's wharf to unload; hopes all guns and men may go out by night and that supplies for arsenal will be fit for use. Believes it best to confine enemy ships to Cooper's river, and to prevent their communication with Ashley river. Suggests advance to plave where Capt. North sounded, and to guard against enemy advance into Ashley river.

[(Charleston, S.C.)] A committee having found that the British schooner Sally and Polly has probably been exposed to yellow fever, the ship has been ordered to sea. In view of this, Rutledge requests a French passport for the vessel, to spare it capture by French cruisers, thus exposing the latter to the fever.
